

ADDRESS IS DELIVERED

MAYOR O. P. CHATFIELD URGES ECONOMY IN CONDUCT OF CITY AFFAIRS

Mayor O. P. Chatfield last night delivered his second annual address to members of the city council, urging economy; the co-operation of all city officials, for the city's good and recommending the construction of short pieces of concrete pavements on streets abutting on Ludington street; the devising of some means to relieve the heavy load now carried by the city's present main sewerage system and calling upon all property owners, particularly on Ludington street, to improve the appearance of the city's principal business district by painting store fronts wherever such action is necessary. Following the address by the mayor the council upon motion of Ald. Smith voted to have the address become a part of the council's proceedings and giving to the mayor a vote of thanks.

Following is the mayor's address delivered to members of the council: Gentlemen of the Common Council of the City of Escanaba, and Fellow Citizens:

It is my pleasure, as well as privilege, to deliver to you my second annual address as mayor of this city. And in doing so I wish to express my deep sense of the responsibility resting upon me for an honest, faithful and impartial discharge of the important duties of the office to which the citizens of this city have again elected me.

We are entering upon the duties of another year as the head of the municipal government, and I would impress upon your minds the fact that the responsibility for a successful and satisfactory year's work rests upon you to the same extent that it rests upon me. I can foresee that the coming year will present to us many perplexing problems; but, knowing this council as well as I do, I have no fear but that each problem, as it comes up, will be solved for the best interest of the city. I wish to give the assurance once more that it will always be the purpose of the Mayor, and I know it will likewise be the purpose of the members of the council, to carefully watch all expenditures of the city funds so that the tax rate may be kept down to the lowest possible point. The annual report of the auditor shows that our expenditures for the past year aggregated about $9,000 less than the preceding year, and I feel certain that by due care we can do fully as well the present year.

I shall follow the same policy of efficiency and economy during this year that I followed the past year, and I shall make it a part of my duty to give careful personal attention to each of the municipal departments to see that each and every city employee is working in harmony with the policy of the mayor and the council in regard to a wise expenditure of the city funds, and to see that no funds are injudiciously expended.

Concrete Streets. I know that I shall have the co-operation of this council and I feel assured that the coming year will be one of harmony and goodwill. That there shall be honest difference of opinion we must expect; but I know that the disposition of all will be to disagree, when disagreement comes, in a fair and gentlemanly manner, and that each will credit the other with the same honesty of purpose which controls his actions as a member of this council.

I have been giving considerable attention to the subject of street paving and after my investigation, during which I have secured information from many other cities, I would strongly recommend the building of concrete pavements. The first cost is somewhat more than macadam pavement, but the up-keep is almost nothing, and the life of the concrete pavement is almost unending.

I would recommend the building of a few short pieces of pavement this year in some of the unsightly places where streets branch off from Ludington street. The necessity for this is apparent after every heavy rainfall when large ponds of water are formed. These give the stranger in the city an unfavorable impression.

I would also recommend the laying of a new sewer at some place where it will relieve the over-taxed Ludington street sewer.

Let's Have More Paint. I would like to suggest to the citizens of the city the value of paint in adding to the attractiveness of the city. You cannot paint too much or too often. There are many buildings in all parts of the city that need paint; but I would like to especially request of all owners and occupants of buildings facing on Ludington street, to paint up all fronts that need it. The cost will be very small and most certainly it will need no argument to convince you that more paint on our

TEDDY IS HOME

(Special to the Press.) New York, May 19.—Theodore Roosevelt returned to New York this afternoon from the wilds of South America on the steamer "Aldan" and was met just outside of quarantine at about 4 o'clock by a tug and the ex-president was transferred. The tug then headed for Oyster Bay, the Colonel's home. Among those on the tug were his wife, his son Theodore, Jr., and his cousin, William Emlen Roosevelt. Many of Roosevelt's friends boarded the steamer at quarantine and received warm greetings from the former president who was brown as a berry and looked to be in good physical condition.

William Wheeler has returned to his home at Wells after visiting at Menominee.

SAYS PARKS EXECUTED

ROBERT KERR, INSISTS THAT U. S. SOLDIER WAS SHOT BY FEDERALISTS WITHOUT A TRIAL

(Special to the Press.) Washington, D. C., May 19.—"Private Parks, in his uniform as an American soldier, was shot to death by a Federalist firing squad in command of a regular officer of the Mexican army," declared Robert J. Kerr, civil governor of Vera Cruz, for one day. Kerr has just come from Vera Cruz. "Moreover, for more than a week," continued Kerr, "the war department has had on file a report from Gen. Funston, giving every detail as to how Parks met death. An eye witness, whose name I can not divulge, saw the tragedy from beginning to end and told me all of it. Parks, confused by tropical heat, wandered from the American lines into the Federal camp. There he was seized and placed in jail. Next morning, without even the formality of a mock trial, he was led to the edge of the Federal camp. He was blindfolded and a firing squad counted off. A moment later Parks fell, his body riddled with bullets."

(Special to the Press.) Durango City, Durango, May 19.—General Carranza this afternoon received a message from General Torro, commanding the constitutionalist forces before San Luis Potosi, stating that his troops engaged in battle with the Federals on May 16. A desperate fight followed and the federal losses in the first day's fighting were reported as 380 dead, and 250 wounded.

(Special to the Press.) Washington, D. C., May 19.—An alarming note, barred Mexican peace prospects today. This was news that former Governor Shao, of Chihuahua, has revolted against Villa and has cast his lot with General Herrera, who is bitterly opposed to the constitutionalist leaders. The president and cabinet held a lengthy session today and considered this matter a general review of the Mexican situation. Former Governor Chae was removed by Villa not long ago, as a military measure, and it is understood, he has gathered a formidable following. A split in the ranks of the constitutionalists at this time would greatly increase the difficulties of the state department and the mediators at Niagara Falls. The efforts of this government to obtain a final settlement of its controversy with Huerta and the reaction of Mexico has now been passed on to the Niagara Falls parley. The American representatives left Washington today. The state department is not expecting any immediate results from the peace conference.

main street would give strangers much more favorable impression.

Beautify Homes and Lawns. I appeal to all citizens to beautify their homes and street lawns by planting shade trees. The Elm should be made the preferred tree because of its beauty and dignity, as well as the fact that it is one of the long-lived trees. All Poplar trees should be cut down and removed as fast as possible, because the roots of the Poplars are ruining a great many of the city sewers and have caused a number of the smallest openings where the pipes come together; and when they are once through they grow rapidly in the sewers and cause them to be blocked.

CLUB MEMBERS WERE PRESENT

WOMAN'S CLUB REPRESENTED AT THE SESSION CITY COUNCIL LAST NIGHT

Demonstrating the interest of members of the Escanaba Woman's Club in affairs of the city, a delegation of the members of that organization attended the meeting of the city council last night when a large number of special and routine matters were disposed of. The club members were rewarded by witnessing the action of the council in appointing a garbage disposal committee and with that committee being empowered to advertise for bids for collecting the garbage of the city, to be submitted to the council at its next regular meeting.

The application of Peter Klein to move his saloon from its present location on Upper Ludington street, was tabled until City Atty. Rushton returns to Escanaba and advises the council. Atty. Joseph F. Cuddy, representing Mar Rodman, who was given Mr. Klein's place in the list of applicants for saloon licenses when it was thought that the latter had forfeited his rights, appeared before the council last night and gave notice that mandamus proceedings would be started to compel the county treasurer to recall the application that had been issued to Mr. Klein and to issue a license to Mr. Rodman.

Permission to use one third of Ludington street was given last night to contractors engaged in constructing buildings for the Richter Brewing company and the Smer Land Company. Members of the council last night voted to give $50 to the C. F. Smith post, of the G. A. R. to aid that organization in properly celebrating Memorial day and accepted the invitation of the post to participate in the ceremonies of the occasion.

The council last night instructed the city clerk to advertise for bids for the construction of a sanitary sewer, leading south from Park avenue in the western portion of the city and also instructed the board of public works to prepare plans and devise a means of outlet for a sewer to be constructed for two blocks on Delta avenue.

The finance committee was last night instructed to borrow $15,000 in anticipation of the coming tax levy, for a period of 90 days.

Are lights were ordered placed at Van Cleave avenue and Washington street and at Jennie and Fifth streets.

BUDGET ADOPTED

The city tax rate for the coming year will be one and one quarter per cent the rate being the same as that fixed for the past few years. The city's budget for expenditures for the coming year, as adopted by members of the council last night amounts to $96,500, but $13,000 of that amount is fictitious in that $8,000 is added to the fire fund and $5,000 to the street fund to wipe out book deficiencies in the records of the city.

That the city contemplates the purchase of an automobile fire truck is indicated by the inclusion in the appropriation for the fire department of an item of $5,000 for the purchase of an auto truck and "other equipment."

Following are the appropriations named in the budget for the several funds, exclusive of the amounts named to supply deficiencies: contingent fund $8,000; fire fund $19,000; poor $4,000; interest and sinking $16,000; library $4,000; park $2,000; police $8,500; street $10,000; salaries $8,000 and water $4,000.

DIVIDEND DECLARED

(Special to the Press.) Detroit, Mich., May 19.—The Ford Motor Car Company today declared an extra cash dividend of a hundred percent. The capital stock is only $2,000,000. On each anniversary of the organization of the company an extra cash dividend is declared, the amount being according to the surplus amassed during the years. Today's dividend shows the effect of the profit sharing plan entered into last January. One year ago the extra dividend amounted to $10,000,000. Henry Ford owning fifty-eight and a half shares was enriched $5,805,000 and today he received but $1,170,000.

WHOLE TOWN OF NADEAU IS BURNING UP

Starting From Small Fire Throught Out, Entire Village May be Burned

FIRE ENGINES COMING

Marquette Sending Flame Fighter to Scene on Special Train

Through a fire that started from a small shack late last night the town of Nadeau in Menominee county is being destroyed by flames and with the already strong hold that the flames have on the village it is thought that it will be impossible to save the town.

At 4 o'clock this morning the loss is: Exchange hotel, two saloons belonging to the Menominee River Brewing company, the station agents house, two store buildings and three vacant houses.

Yesterday afternoon a fire was thought to be extinguished in a shack after the roof had burned off. Late last night while the village slept the fire broke anew and had gained such headway before discovered that it was impossible to check the progress of the flames.

At 3 o'clock the Marquette Fire department volunteered to send a fire engine to the scene and 25 minutes later had it aboard a special train carrying a big crew of fire fighters. Nadeau Brothers big store was still standing at 3:30 o'clock this morning, but hopes of saving the building and in fact any portion of the town had been given up. The entire population of the town is fighting the flames.

LEAGUE IS LAUNCHED

SCHEDULE OF MARQUETTE-DELTA COUNTY LEAGUE WILL OPEN ON MAY 30 WITH LOCALS AT GLADSTONE

The Marquette-Delta County Baseball league was formally organized at an enthusiastic meeting held at Ishpeming last night. The league schedule will open on May 30 with Escanaba playing at Gladstone and Negaunee playing at Ishpeming. John Lacey, of Ishpeming was last night elected president of the league and an arbitration board, to which all questions will be submitted was named as follows: Stephen Simons, Ishpeming; Sam Densmore, Gladstone, Dr. Fuller, Negaunee and Isaac Schram, Escanaba. The arbitration board will take place of other league officers and all questions in dispute will be submitted to them and in case of a tie vote the president will have the deciding vote. Under the agreement each city will be allowed to engage not to exceed three outside players, but in case of special weakness in any team, the arbitration board is empowered to give such club authority to strengthen its aggregation. The league was launched last night with great enthusiasm and under circumstances particularly propitious for a successful season.

PEACE DOVE OVER COUNCIL

MAYOR CHATFIELD'S APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED WITH BUT ONE DISSENTING VOTE

The dove of peace fluttered over Escanaba's council chamber last night and Mayor O. P. Chatfield's slate of appointments was confirmed with only Ald. Edward Smith, voting in opposition. Following the the appointments made by the mayor and confirmed by the council last night: H. J. Rushton, city attorney; William McDonald, city engineer; Miss Valeska Ecke, deputy city clerk; Andrew Liverston, chief of police; William Meiers, chief of fire department; Dr. A. S. Before announcing his slate of appointments, which were submitted in two installments, the last four offices in the list being presented after the first list, Mayor Chatfield said that he realized that some of the aldermen might not agree with him in his choice but he was satisfied that every man named would make an efficient official. The vote was then taken without any discussion being indulged in.

OPEN AIR CONCERTS AT PARK ASSURED

Open air concerts by the Escanaba Military Band at the city park at regular intervals during the coming summer, was assured by action taken by members of the council last night. The park board was given unanimous permission by the aldermen to erect a suitable bandstand at the park for band concerts, the cost to be paid out of the park appropriation.

SAXON CAR MAKES RECORD IN TEST

A test of the Saxon car for fuel economy was completed Saturday. Starting at 7 a. m., the car completed its nonmotor stop test over the boulevard system at 6:30 last night. The last drop of gasoline filling a six gallon tank was used at the end of the one hundred and ninety-third mile. This is an average of 32.1 miles to the gallon.

Mrs. Jules Edom of this city, is recovering at St. Vincent's hospital at Green Bay from the effects of an operation to which she submitted last week for the removal of a cancer from her left breast. The operation, performed by Dr. Minnehan, is thought to be a complete success and the early recovery of the patient is anticipated.

GARRITY RESIGNED

Immediately after the principal portion of Mayor Chatfield's appointments had been confirmed by the council last night, Ald. John Garrity, of the Sixth ward, presented his resignation to the council. In accepting the resignation of Ald. Garrity, upon motion of Ald. E. J. Noreus, the council extended to the retiring member a vote of thanks for his long and efficient service in the body. The motion was accepted by a unanimous vote. It was evidently expected by Mayor Chatfield that Ex. Ald. C. N. Wood would be named to succeed Ald. Garrity, as Mr. Wood's name is included throughout the mayor's list of committee assignments, but Ald. Smith asked that he be given until the next council meeting to present the name of a successor to Mr. Garrity and the request was granted.

RAIN NOW IMPERATIVE

DEPUTY FIRE WARDEN SAYS MOST DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN DISTRICT'S HISTORY THREATENS

"Unless rain comes soon this district will experience the most disastrous forest fires in the history" was the statement last night of Deputy Warden Herman Leisner when he reached the city after spending two days in the fire swept district. Leisner will leave the city again early this morning to superintend fire fighting work in different parts of the country in a desperate effort to save property that is threatened. He has instructed the supervisor of every township, who by virtue of their offices are fire wardens, to urge every possible precaution to protect the property of settlers and homesteaders. According to Deputy Leisner a heavy fire is burning in a chopping west of Cornell.

A fire of big volume is sweeping a side district north of Northland. West of Lathrop and within three quarters of a mile of the timber operations of John D. Colburn a disastrous fire is sweeping the district.

On the Whitefish branch of the North Western road scattered fires are raging.

In the Danforth settlement several dangerous fires are burning but up to the present time no serious damage has been done.

The Clearmont camps near Turner with all equipment were entirely destroyed by fire and only by the heroic work of the fire fighters were the horses and a big amount of timber saved. Although it was not fully ascertained last night it is thought that all of Hopp's camp near Maple Ridge had been destroyed.

Flame fires had last night reached the Beaver district and it is feared that by this morning they will have gained entrance to the big timber of that section.

Gurley was last night reported to be entirely destroyed but the report could not be confirmed.

Perkins was last night endangered by the fires on all sides.

In the Big Bay district or around Nahma small fires continue to burn but nothing of a serious nature has yet developed.

For the entire length of the E. & L. S. railway fire fighting companies have been organized to cope with the leaping flames.

(Special to the Press.) Calumet, Mich., May 19.—Only vague reports are coming in from isolated sections of the upper peninsula concerning the forest fire situation and nothing definite has come concerning the sweeping of Iron River, Wis. by forest fires this morning. In the Copper Country district the situation is well in hand. Bad brush fires on farms between Phoenix and Eagle River threatened the latter town this afternoon, but was beaten back by into heavy timber at Seven Mile Point of Keweenaw and destroyed the Quello lumber camps. A change of wind in the Trap Rock valley saved threatened farms there. Countless fires are burning along eastern shore of Keweenaw peninsula covering Lake Superior with smoke. The summer cottages at Twin Lakes are reported destroyed.

(Special to the Press.) Detroit, Mich., May 19.—Late this afternoon the wind turned the forest flames toward town of Bliss, Mich., near Petoskey and it seems doomsday. The town has a thousand population. Gwinn, 22 miles from Marquette entirely surrounded by flames. The town has 3000 population. Princeton,

W. J. ANTHONY IS CALLED

FOREMAN OF ENGINEERS FOUND DEAD IN THE KITCHEN OF HIS HOME IN WOLCOTT STREET BY SON WILLIS LAST NIGHT

Evidently stricken with apoplexy while preparing his supper on Monday night, W. J. Anthony, pioneer resident of the city and Road Foreman of Engineers of the Peninsula Division of the Chicago and North Western railway for 15 years, was found dead in the kitchen of his home at 414 Wolcott street at 8 o'clock last night by his son Willis Anthony. Mrs. Anthony is visiting in Seattle.

The son rushed to a phone and called the North Western station where he located his father-in-law, T. M. Judson, who was about to board the train. Supt. C. R. Andrew and Master Mechanic Becker were notified and drove at once to the Anthony home. Seeing the prostrate form of Mr. Anthony on the floor, Supt. Andrews at once called Coroner Carlson and Undertaker D. A. Oliver.

On Monday Mr. Anthony went to Powers and returned on an ore train Powers on business and returned on an ore train and after returning to the office in the railroad yards where he remained until 5:15 o'clock when he started for his home. When he left the office he stated that he was going to Chicago on the evening passenger and that he would not return for a few days. Enroute to his home he met and chatted briefly with D. A. Oliver at the Mead Drug store. From that time only suppositions can be made as to the movements of the foreman of engineers.

At the home a suit of clothes which he evidently had intended to wear, to Chicago were laid out on the bed and on top of them was his drinking cup. In the kitchen potatoes in a frying pan were found on the stove in addition to a coffee pot. On the table were some sliced onions, butter, bread and other eatables while in his hand, as he lay where he had pitched forward into the corner of the kitchen was a can opener, indicating that he was about to open a can of corned beef that sat on the table.

Yesterday morning his absence at the office was not noticed as it was remembered that he had said that he was going to Chicago. Last night going out for a walk, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Jr., walked around by the former's father's home. When in front of the house the family dog could be heard barking and thinking it peculiar that his father had left the dog in the house, the son went forward and upon a closer examination it was found that a light was burning in the kitchen.

Even then the son thought that his father had left the light burning. All doors were found to be locked and going in through an upstairs window the son was struck with horror when he found the prone and lifeless form of his father lying on the kitchen floor. Dashing from the room he called for his father-in-law, Mr. Judson, at the station, who was going to Chicago and who with Supt. Andrews and Master Mechanic Becker rushed to the scene. It was quickly realized that Mr. Anthony was dead and had been for several hours. Coroner Carlson and undertaker Oliver were called and after the body had been viewed was taken to the Oliver undertaking parlors.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Anthony, with her daughter, Miss Louise Anthony, went to Seattle where the latter was married to Frank W. Barr. Mrs. Anthony was to have started home on June 1. Both mother and daughter have been notified.

In addition to his wife and daughter, Mr. Anthony is survived by two sons, Edward of Ishpeming and Willis of this city. The son in Ishpeming has been notified.

Mr. Anthony was 60 years of age and came to Escanaba from the Copper Country when 10 years of age. Securing his schooling here he started his employ with the North Western railway in the machine shops over 40 years ago. From that position he arose to Road Foreman of Engineers which position he held for 15 years before his death. Mr. Anthony was a member of the Escanaba Lodge of Masons and also of the Commandry and Shriners.

In his life that he has lived almost wholly in Escanaba, Mr. Anthony has made for himself and enviable reputation as a man of strict integrity and conscientiousness of purpose. By his death not only does the city lose one of its most respected citizens but also the North Western railway has lost an assistant whose position will indeed be difficult to fill.

Mich., near Gwinn with 2000 population, is also threatened. There are fires in no less than fourteen counties tonight.

NO MISAPPREHENSION.

Subsequently to the taking of Vera Cruz a crowd of students became noisy in the streets of Montevideo. They called down maledictions on the Yankees, and expressed great sympathy for the outraged Mexicans.

The young men did not, of course, have any adequate idea of what they were roaring about. They roared because youth likes to roar, and because Latin-America has, until recently, considered the United States as deserving of roaring on almost any provocation.

The Uruguayan authorities suppressed the demonstration before it had gone far. More than that, the minister of foreign affairs called at the United States legation to express his regret and offer an apology. The national legislature took up the matter, and, by an overwhelming vote, sustained the attitude of the minister.

Uruguay is one of the smallest but one of the most enlightened of South American nations. The intelligent people of Uruguay, like those of Brazil, Argentina and Chile, understand that there is a new Latin-American policy at Washington. They realize that the era of exploitation is over, and that the American government is determined to free its diplomacy from its burden of fostering privileges and concessions. They know, doubtless, that the action at Vera Cruz has not been an act of hostility to the Mexican people, but an act of genuine friendliness. These things are too clear to be misunderstood by men of average intelligence and power of observation.

REMARKABLE RECORD

Flesh-forming Food That Succeeds Nearly Every Time.

A man or woman might as well starve outright as to take food into the stomach and not have it assimilated, yet in Escanaba, as well as in every other town and city, there are many people who are thin, pale and seem underfed, simply because the food they eat is not assimilated, and fails to make good blood and firm flesh.

Samoses, the wonderful flesh-forming food, taken before or after meals, mingles with the food, so that it is assimilated by the system and makes rich blood and pleasing plumpness.

Anyone who is thin, weak, scrawny and emaciated can put 50c on deposit with the West End Drug Store and take home a box of Samoses. If the treatment does not give a noticeable increase in good, firm flesh and restore strength and health, they will return the money without any questions.

HUERTA'S REPUTATION

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER

Victoriano Huerta, who for the past fifteen months has been provisional president and dictator of Mexico, and who now, on the verge of his downfall, has placed his resignation in the hands of his delegates to the Niagara Falls peace conference, was always known as a professional soldier, up to the time of his seizure of the government of Mexico.

Huerta, in whose veins flows Indian blood, is 60, a native of Chihuahua. He graduated from a military academy and was an excellent student, particularly in the natural sciences and mathematics. He was prominent in giving strength to the army organization of Porfirio Diaz and fought loyally for the former president. He also fought for the federal cause under Provisional President de la Barra, and when Madero was elected, Huerta supported the man whom he had fought as a rebel.

When the younger Diaz revolted and overthrew Madero, in February, 1913, Huerta was made ranking general in Mexico City. It was charged that his treachery to Madero enabled Diaz to revolution to succeed and that Huerta later was instrumental in the assassination of Madero.

HAIRS PLANTED ON BALD HEADS AS IF THEY GREW

Budapest, May 19.—A method of sewing hairs to the human scalp in cases of baldness has been successfully used by Dr. Szekely at the hospital of Saint Stephane in this city. The number of hairs planted in one head of one patient has been as high as 50,000. One hundred hairs are drawn through punctures in the scalp in every square centimeter and as both ends are left free this makes more than 1,000 hairs to each square inch.

In the operation very fine fold wires are used, one five hundredths of an inch in diameter, and fine long hairs from a woman's head are attached to these. The gold loop acts as an anchor, which after sterilization is introduced into the subcutaneous tissue, where it is slightly twisted, thus holding the hair in permanent position.

It is claimed that five hundred hairs can thus be planted in three-quarters of an hour. A special instrument has been designed by Dr. Szekely for planting the gold wires, which are so fine that after the work is completed for planting 50,000 hairs there is only one gramme of gold left in the scalp.

The hair becomes perfectly natural after a capsule of tissue forms around the gold not. The inflammation entirely disappears within ten days after the operation and no evil results have ensued from any of the planting. The hair can be treated in the ordinary way after the operation and the doctor's earliest patient, who underwent the operation seven years ago, has a beautiful head of natural glossy hair.

Social Happenings of the Day

Announce Rebekah Dance.

The members of the Rebekah degree team will hold a dancing party at Clark's hall on Thursday evening, May 21. The Escanaba Military Band orchestra will furnish the musical program for the affair.

The Retail Clerks Dance

One of the most successful dancing parties ever arranged in the city by a similar organization was that of the Retail Clerks at Clark's hall on Monday evening. From the very opening of the evening every one in attendance enjoyed themselves thoroughly. The Escanaba Military Band six piece orchestra furnished the musical program for the affair.

Another Mothers Meeting

The Mothers Club of North Escanaba will again gather at the Webster school at North Escanaba on Friday afternoon at which time several matters of vital importance to every mother in that section of the city will be taken up and discussed. The coming session is expected to bring out more mothers than any previous session of like nature ever arranged in the city.

WRECKERS SHY AT PRICE JOB

Cleveland, Ohio, May 19.—Bids opened at the office of the Salvage association from wreckers on the coast for floating the steamer Charles S. Price, overturned in Lake Huron, will be submitted to the underwriters, but it unlikely that any action will be taken.

Bids for the job probably will be called for again about the middle of June. Lake wreckers do not want to bid for the work until they can make a thorough examination of the wrecked ship and they will be given a chance to look her over. Several parties want to buy the Price but the offers made have been turned down.

CHICKEN HAS FOUR WINGS, AND FOUR LEGS

Stambaugh, May 19.—A freak chicken that surpasses any similar malformation in this part of the country is now preserved in alcohol in the Stambaugh High School. The chicken has four perfectly formed legs and four perfectly formed wings attached to the body. The head has two perfect bills there are only two eyes. The body is perfectly formed and no malformation is noticeable until the extra pair of legs and wings sprout out from a point near the first joints.

The chicken was hatched at the home of J. T. Hayes in Palatka. It grew to the normal size of any chicken at the time of hatching, but did not live after it was taken from the shell.

American Sanitation Experts Making A Conquest of Sickness in Vera Cruz

Vera Cruz, May 19.—Vera Cruz is rapidly showing effects of sanitation measures instituted by American authorities. Buzzards are fast leaving. They find nothing to do. The great public fish and meat market, before the American occupation a breeding spot for disease, is screened in and can no longer be located by its offensive odors. The market building has been thoroughly cleaned. Floors and stalls are washed every day. Street vendors of fruit and sweets are compelled to cover their wares which are purchased to a large extent by soldiers and sailors. An anti-spitting ordinance has been

REAL STRAD LONG SINCE HAS GONE

Chicago, May 19.—Take it from Knute Reinhold, president of the newly formed American Academy of Violin Makers, that the famous old Stradivarius fiddles exist today only in fiction. The violins labeled "Strads" and now sold at prices ranging well above $5,000 are the output of a Budapest violin-maker who practically controls an "ancient violin trust" according to Reinhold.

"Some people don't seem to know that the civil war is over—also that Strativarius, Guarnerius and all the old violin-makers are dead—and have been for a long time," said Reinhold. "They seem to think that Strad left several cargoes of his fiddles, enough to supply the world over."

"Now the truth of it is that if I wanted half a dozen genuine Strads, I could cable to a man in Budapest and he would send them, each one marked at $5,000 or over, with the understanding that I would get half of whatever I could get out of them."

"Not long ago I ran across a violin I had made myself, with my label removed, a 'genuine' Strad label substituted. It sold for $5,000."

AT THE PETERSON.

With an all-star cast presenting three of the most popular operas of the day the coming of the Sheehan English Opera company to this city is looked forward to with unusual interest, as it is no doubt one of the most important musical offerings of the season.

The company headed by Joseph F. Sheehan, includes such artists as Miss Mirth Carmen, one of America's leading prima donnas, Miss Laura Baer the famous contralto, who has won an enviable reputation both in this country and abroad, and Nelson R. Shanley, one of the best known baritones of the day. It is safe to say that it will be a long time before such a combination of renowned artists are again heard together in English opera.

The performance consists of a triple bill of three of the world's most popular operas, "Il Trovatore," "Bohemian Girl" and "Martha," and it is not exaggeration to say that it is the most interesting performance of opera ever given in this country. It includes the entire tower scene of "Il Trovatore" with the famous Miserere, the entire dungeon scene—said to be the most beautiful in the opera—all of the well known numbers of "The Bohemian Girl," "Dreamt in Marble Halls," "You'll Remember Me, Bliss Forever Past, Etc., as well as the entire second act of "Martha," with its Spinning Wheel Quartet, Goodnight Quartet, and "The Last Rose of Summer."

The engagement is certain to prove the musical and society event of the season.

BOSTON MARKETS

No change in either list today. Attention still centered on situation and traders are unwilling to make any new commitments till situation clearer. Butte Superior is strong, owing to the excellent earnings and Granby seems to be working higher. The other coppers are dull with prices unchanged.

DAILY LETTER

Irregularity was the order of things during the major portion of the session but prices recovered in the last hour on scattered short covering, which apparently was induced by the relatively small amounts of long stock which was disclosed on the declines. There was no news of importance and consequently dullness was the predominant feature though sentiment continued cheerful. Despite the fact that speculative sellers seem disposed to offer strong resistance to advancing tendencies, the stock list is under good control and we believe that the strong forces arrayed on the constructive side, will succeed in promoting a continuance of the rise and in establishing substantially higher range of quoted values before material reactions occur.

"There Is a House With a Bathroom" was an expression at one time calculated to arouse interest, but now, conditions are entirely different. To build a house without a bathroom merely raises a question as to the good judgment of the builder. People know that he has either not considered or else misjudged the importance that an up-to-date bathroom has in increasing the value of the house, both as to renting and selling value.

PLAIN JIM BARNES

By JOHN SEFTON.

As the car doors were closing a man, hatless, breathless and disheveled, dashed down the platform and forcibly wedged them open. Following him came a second, wearing a plain uniform and a peaked cap. He caught the first man at the doors and strove to drag him backward. The train was already moving.

"Stop him!" yelled the pursuer. "He is an escaped—"

But the first man had gained the car, and clung, breathless and triumphant, to a strap, while the second, seeing that he could not drag back the fugitive, followed him. The doors banged to behind him and the train was fairly started upon its journey through the tunnel under the East river which separates New York from New Jersey.

"Say, what's the trouble?" demanded the conductor, coming through the throng of excited passengers. "You fellows might have been killed. Ain't you got no better sense than to do a thing like that?"

The first man had not yet recovered his breath, but the second gasped: "I am an attendant from the insane asylum, and this man is an escaped lunatic. He had been there nine years—"

"Ten, you cur!" snapped the other, glaring at him.

"He was a trusty," said the pursuer bitterly. "He ran away this morning. As soon as we found he had gone I was sent after him—and now I've got him."

"You have, have you?" sneered the other. "Well, you'll find out your mistake, McCormick. I may be a lunatic in New York, but I'm sane in Jersey until the courts decide otherwise, and don't you forget it."

"That's right!" "That's the boy!" "You're safe now!" ejaculated a score of passengers.

The attendant looked angrily about him. "Do you mean to say I can't get him back?" he exclaimed. "Why, the man's a homicidal lunatic. He thinks he's the czar one day, and the see that justice is done, Mr. Barnes. Here is my card, and I shall be pleased to give evidence in your favor at any time."

"I wish you'd make him give me my watch," said Barnes, pointing to the gold chain which hung across the attendant's coat. "I left it behind me and I guess he picked it up. I want to pawn it. Those scoundrels got all my money."

"He's lying," declared the attendant. "That is my watch, and if any man touches it or lays a finger on me I'll have him arrested. And let me tell you," he continued, addressing the portly gentleman, "you'll be sorry for your part in this morning's work."

"That's all right," jeered the portly man. "I'm a lawyer, and I don't think I'm altogether without influence in this community." He addressed the crowd again. "We can't touch that fellow's watch without proof that it was stolen," he said, "but no doubt you will all be glad to assist our friend to get shelter until something can be done for him."

He took off his hat, drew a fat wallet from his pocket, and extracted a twenty-dollar bill from it, placing it in the hat. "This is going to be the sweetener," he said.

Bills and silver coins rained into the hat from the sympathizing crowd that now filled the entire platform. Up and down went the portly gentleman with the hat, and he did not cease until it was nearly full. Then he counted the amount of his collection.

"One hundred and nineteen dollars, ten cents," he announced. "I guess that this will give our friend here a more hopeful view of life."

"I couldn't take it," faltered the fugitive.

"Take it!" exclaimed the portly gentleman. "Of course you'll take it or I'll know the reason why. Come, now, put this into your pocket or I'll ram it down your throat."

The fugitive accepted the money with a shame-faced air, and the portly gentleman turned upon the attendant.

"Come, now get out of here," he said, "and make no further trouble!"

Followed by the jeers of the crowd the man took himself off, muttering and sneering. Then the portly gentleman took the fugitive by the arm and led him tenderly up the stairs and out of the station. A few young men and boys followed them for a while, but gradually dropped behind, until at last the two were left alone.

The portly gentleman conducted his companion round several blocks and led him to the Tunnel station again, this time upon the opposite side. Upon this platform the asylum attendant was waiting.

"I thought you guys was never coming," he growled.

"Ninety-nine dollars," said the portly gentleman, withdrawing his own bill from the loot. That's thirty-three each. Not bad for a morning's work. But say! It's worth it, thinking out these new games every day."

STRANGE SEQUEL TO DREAM

Following Dead Man's Visionary Appearance to Friend Came an Unsigned Picture.

The following story of a dream was told to a correspondent by an acquaintance who is about as stolid and unimaginative a man as one could meet.

He had a friend of whom he had lost sight for some time. This friend committed suicide and one night, soon after he had done so, the unimaginative man dreamed that he was walking along a street after dusk when the bust of the dead man appeared to him and requested him to follow it. He did so, and it led him to a house, the door of which was open, and then up some stairs to a room where there was a table on which lay a number of books, all of which were lying open.

The dead man had been a great reader and therefore there was nothing unusual in the spectacle of a great many books in his room. The bust turned to the unimaginative man and begged him to turn over a page of each book so that it might continue to read. He did so, and he remembers that the bust became petulant when he turned over two pages in mistake.

When all the pages were turned the bust appeared to be happy. The dreamer awoke and told his wife about it. When he went down to breakfast he found a letter lying on the table, bearing the postmark of a town of which he had no knowledge other than its name. He had never been there, nor so far as he was aware, had the dead man, nor had he any friends or relatives in the town. The only relative of the dead man of whom he had any knowledge lived in another city.

When he opened the envelope he found inside it a small photograph of the dead man, showing his bust only. There was not any letter inclosed with it, nor anything to denote by whom it had been sent, and to this day he does not know from whom he received it.

The Trimmer. "The late Bishop Bowman," said a Philadelphia minister, "once rebuked my too soft and conciliatory leanings by telling me a story about a little girl."

"This little girl, it seems, had written with great pains a composition on the cow. The composition ran as follows:

"The cow is a very useful animal. That evening the bishop dined at the little girl's house, and her mother, since she was a very little girl, indeed, was proud of the composition, and requested its author to read it aloud."

"The little girl got her manuscript, but, instead of reading it as it stood, she amended it on the bishop's behalf so that it ran:

"The cow is the most useful animal there is except religion."

Wingless Victory.

Aunt Dinah was a colored saint in Charleston, who could shout above the entire congregation. It was the custom during the collection to sing "Fly abroad, thou mighty Gospel," and Aunt Dinah always threw back her head, shut her eyes, and sang away lustily till the plate was returned to the altar.

Deacon Alphonius Green, noting this, stopped when he reached her pew one Sunday and said:

"Look-a-heah, Dinah! What use you a-singing 'Fly abroad, thou mighty Gospel' if you ain't give nothin' to make her fly?"

SCALP ITCHED AND BURNED

Greenwood, Ind.—"First my hair began to fall, then my scalp itched and burned when I became warm. I had pimples on my scalp; my hair was falling out gradually until I had scarcely any hair on my head. I couldn't keep the dandruff off at all. My hair was dry and lifeless and I lost rest at night from the terrible itching sensation. I would pull my hat off and scratch my head any place I happened to be."

"For several years I was bothered with pimples on my face. Some of them were hard red spots, some were full of matter, and many blackheads. I was always picking at them and caused them to be sore. They made my face look so badly I was ashamed to be seen."

"I tried massage creams for my face and all kinds of hair tonic and home-made remedies, but they only made things worse. Nothing did the work until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed my face with the Cuticura Soap, then put plenty of Cuticura Ointment on. Three months' use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment has made my face as smooth and clean as can be." (Signed) C. M. Brothers, Eh?

A certain curate was of a painfully nervous temperament, and in consequence was constantly making awkward remarks intended as compliments—to the bishop and others.

Having distinguished himself in an unusual degree during a gathering of clergy at an afternoon tea a short while ago in the bishop's palace, he was taken to task for his failings by a senior curate, who was one of his companions on the way home.

"Look here," said Simms, the senior, decidedly, "you are a donkey. Why can't you keep quiet instead of making your asinine remarks? I am speaking to you now as a brother."

Loud laughter interrupted him at this point, and for the moment he did not see the joke.

emperor of China the next, and who he is today I don't know."

"I know," answered the fugitive. "I'm Jim Barnes, a sane man, and I'm not going back to New York with you."

"That's his cunning," explained the attendant. "He knows we think him Jim Barnes, but he doesn't believe he is. Honest, now," he continued, addressing the fugitive, "ain't you Julius Caesar? You know you are."

"Not on your grandmother! I'm plain Jim Barnes," retorted the other. "Come, come, Mr. Washington, you know perfectly well that you're on your way to Valley Forge to meet the Continental army, now don't you?" pleaded the other.

"I tell you I'm plain Jim Barnes, and if you call me by any other name I'll smash your face in," replied the fugitive.

"Butly for you, my boy. We'll see fair play," exclaimed a portly man with gold-framed eyeglasses. "They can't get you back from Jersey, and you're as free as I am. So you'd best go back quietly," he said, addressing the attendant.

Meanwhile the train after one or two stops, which added to the crowd and to the excitement also, was plowing its way into Hoboken station. As it slowed to a standstill the two men stepped off and stood glaring at each other, while the crowd gathered once more around them.

"Now, Jim," said the man in the cap, touching the other on the arm, "you come home like a good boy. There's stuffed turkey for supper, stuffed with creamed oysters. If you don't come right away it will be cold, Jim."

"I say I'm sane," yelled the other to the crowd in exasperation. "Ten years they had me in that asylum, because my family wanted my property. I've never been insane for a moment. Do I look insane? Do I act insane? And I'm going to bring suit right away to secure my rights and punish the conspirators. And now I'll be going, and if you molest me, McCormick," he added, "I'll have you arrested. You're nobody in New Jersey and you may as well understand it."

"You leave that fellow alone!" exclaimed the portly gentleman. "I'll

NEW BOOKS AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

"The Flying Inn," by Gilbert Keith Chesterton. Mr. Chesterton at his amazing best. "The Nation" says of it: "There is an astonishing deal of rollicking good stuff in the book, wit, satire, drollery, philosophy, and an amazing trick of character-drawing in a style that mingles realism, the fantastic, even the passionate and fantastic."

"I like the book," says Conings by Dawson, author of "The Garden Without Walls." "Its irresponsibility is gargantuan. It is all against proclaiming truth with a whine; when it preaches most earnestly, it laughs loudest."

"When Men Live My," by Richard Clark Cabot. "Dr. Cabot's own favorite prescription for 'broken souls and wounded characters' is work, and he has found by observation that other social experts apply two other remedies: recreation and affection; and that they 'also hope rather helplessly that a fourth resource, worship will somehow get into the sufferer's life.'"

He dwells on each cure interestingly, with a broad minded spirit and genial outlook. The philosophy of this decidedly worth-while book, will appeal to the average thinking man, whatever his business or profession and will be an inspiration to many.

"The Treasure," by Kathleen Norris. Another delightful story of the American home by the author of "Mother," which should be read by every woman in the community.

"From The Angle of Seventeen," by Eden Phillpotts. A delightfully humorous portrait of a pompous but engaging English youth, who is gradually emerging from boyhood into the responsibilities of manhood. Corkey, fresh from school, is launched into the business world as a clerk in a fire insurance office, and is immediately absorbed in his wonderful experiences and entirely captivated by the sense of his own importance. His comments on affairs are irresistibly, though unconsciously funny. "The Nation" says "From beginning to end there is no flaw in the delicious boy-sty, with its artless slang and its equally artless pursuit of threadbare 'literary' phrases."

"The Masked War," by William J. Burns. A real detective story with plenty of thrills, but without the extravagances of fiction, told by one of the world's best known detectives. A copy of the new currency bill is on file at the library for those who are interested in studying it.

Any of the above mentioned books may be borrowed from the Public Library for home reading.

OFFICERS FAVOR

K. O. T. M. MERGER

George S. Lovelace, head of the Knights of the Modern Maccabees, and Daniel P. Markey, commander of the Maccabees of the World, met in Detroit Thursday in conference with other officers of both bodies and completed plans for a consolidation of the two orders.

The merger will go into effect if ratified by the convention of the Modern Maccabees in Bay City June 10. Under the terms of the agreement, the two orders, which were originally one, will reunite to form a large fraternal organization with a capital of about $14,000,000 and a membership of about 500,000.

The agreement, which the officers of both orders have ratified, will hold good for the Maccabees of the World. Sanction for this sort of combination was given by the organization in 1907 the only restriction being that the Modern Maccabees conform to rates which would not lessen the value of the assets of the Maccabees of the world. The scale of rates from the fraternal insurance, so that now both organizations are operating on the national fraternal rate scale.

Will Form Grand Tent.

The consolidation, if carried, will mean that the Modern Maccabees will become a grand tent of the Maccabees of the World. The local tents will not be affected by the amalgamation in any way. They will still be governed by the Modern Maccabees which will state headquarters at Port Huron. The grand tents of the various states will have delegates to the supreme tent, which will have the headquarters at the Maccabees of the World's office in Detroit. The only change in local tents will occur in small cities where both orders have small tents and where these can combine to advantage.

Both orders have practically the same ritual, so that the consolidation may be consummated without difficulty. The Knights of the Modern Maccabees was the original organization. This was established for business in Michigan only in 1881. In 1883, the same men formed the supreme tent to do business outside of the state.

Friction Caused Split.

This joint arrangement continued until about 1902, when friction arose between the supreme tent and the grand camp, or state organization. The Knights of the Modern Maccabees then started to carry on business in other states and the supreme tent became the Maccabees of the World.

The amalgamation would reduce the expenses of both orders materially in addition to making both stronger," said Mr. Lovelace Thursday. "Under the consolidation, the Maccabees of the World's office would handle the death benefits for both their tents and ours. We would have the field work for Michigan. The only new step made necessary by the plan will be the election of a delegate from our grand camp to the supreme tent."

The proposed consolidation will affect in no way the ladies' auxiliary of either organization. These societies are independent of the men's orders and will probably not combine. It was rumored that the Ladies of the Modern Maccabees were not in sympathy with the proposed amalgamation of the other orders. This was denied by the officers of the men's organizations. Mrs. N. H. Gilbert, 581 Concord avenue, who is a supreme officer, said Thursday night that she felt the ladies would have no objection to the merger.

CHIEF JUSTICE WHITE CANES NEGRO OVER DOG.

Washington, May 19.—Chief Justice White of the United States supreme court came to the defense of his murdered Airedale terrier when it was attacked by a bull terrier, a negro, and tempted to interfere and it was said that he felt the weight of the eminent jurist's cane. The chief justice succeeded in loosening the grip of the bull terrier, which was hustled away by the negro.

SECOND WOMEN TO POSSE AS MAN IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, Wis., May 19.—Police officials who have lately had to do with the unmaking of "Ralph Kerwinio," who posed for thirteen years as a man and even married Miss Dorothy Kienowsky, recall the strange case of Anna Morris, who lived here for thirteen years too as a man under the name of Frank Blunt.

It was July 12, 1893, that the late Lieut. Frank Millet and Sergt. Gleason then detectives, were given a warrant for the arrest of Frank Blunt on the charge of grand larceny preferred at Fond du Lac. They had no trouble in finding Frank. He lived with Jesse Blunt, an expressman and coal dealer who had a store where the American theater, Third street, near Wells, now stands. He was believed by everyone to be the old man's son.

When Blunt was taken to the central police station the officers began to search him when suddenly he cried: "Don't do that! I am a woman."

And so it proved to be. He was a perfectly formed woman, although stockier than the usual woman. Then Frank admitted that he was Alma Morris, 23, a cook. She was born in Nova Scotia and came to Milwaukee several years before her arrest. She had donned men's clothes because they assured her greater freedom than she would have as a woman.

She played the gallant among the wives of the men living in her neighborhood. The police recall that twice husbands complained against her and threatened to bring suit for divorce against their wives.

Smoked Cigarettes.

A down-town barber recalls her as having been a steady customer. "He would smoke cigarettes in public and seemed to have plenty of money although I don't remember of his having done any work," he said. I cut his hair regularly, and I have a recollection of having shaved him once or twice. When old Blunt was told of Frank's sex he declared that he had adopted him as a boy and had never known he was not of that sex."

When arrested she said that she had once been married but the police could never learn anything about that event. She was sentenced to a year in Waupun on the larceny charge. Upon her release she donned woman's clothes and disappeared.

REBELS AS VICTORS CRY 'VIVA WILSON'

Vera Cruz, May 19.—May 13 is certain to become a day of as great importance in Mexican history as either Cinco de Mayo or Sept. 16. In the days to come streets and plazas will be named after it; for this was the date of the deciding battle of the bitterest revolution in the stormy history of the republic.

The taking of Tampico by constitutionalists not only points to the end of the Huerta regime, but to the end of the Mexico that was. Under the inquiring guns of the American warships the victors are determined to show the world they know how civilized conquerors should behave in a captive city.

No shrieks of tortured women, no blowing up of strong-boxes, no sackings of houses, no slaughter of non-combatant, not even a carnage of executions with an army of savages drunk and bedrugged with ever sort of loot and shrieking of Indian yells of triumph. This was the first time for a Mexican force to storm a city and not give it over to pillage.

If the constitutional leaders had been taking notes during the American occupation of Vera Cruz they could not have learned the lesson better. Pablo Gonzalez took up his quarters in the Imperial hotel just as Fuston did in the hotel Terminal in Vera Cruz.

Two soldiers caught looting in defiance of the orders of the commandant were taken to the suburbs and summarily shot. Complaints of citizens were listened to patiently. Order was restored and all prisoners paroled instead of being shot.

Most significant of all were the "vivas" for President Wilson. And this was the culmination of a week of bloody battle, the story of which has been only fragmentary up to this time. The story of the early days of artillery fire, feints and sallies, has all been well told.

Tuesday morning the rebels opened a heavy artillery fire with a battery commanded by Jack Von Tollenheim an American, who, when he lost out at West Point, took this road to military glory. "Under this cover rebels swarmed over the trenches and down the hill firing, yelling, charging, stampeding the untrained volunteers who broke and fled through the cemetery."

WILSON CONGRATULATES KING OF NORWAY ON CENTENNIAL

Washington, D. C., May 19.—President Wilson and King Haakon VII. of Norway have exchanged the following cablegrams, the text of which was made known in Washington today:

"The White House, May 17, 1914. His majesty, Haakon VII.

"King of Norway, Christiania. "In the name of the government and people of the United States, I extend to your majesty sincere felicitations on the centennial being celebrated today in Norway. The government of the United States is keenly sensible of the cordial feeling harbored in your enlightened and progressive country toward the United States and in assuring you of the desire and aim of this government to reciprocate and foster that feeling, I avail myself of the opportunity to renew to your majesty my personal good wishes for your continued welfare and happiness."

(Signed) "WOODROW WILSON, President of the United States."

"Christiania, May 18, 1914. "The President, Washington: "I thank your excellency very much for your very kind telegram, which my people appreciate very much as we have so many Norwegians who are now good American subjects, at the same time not forgetting the old mother country."

taking refuge in the fort on Escanaba hill.

The federal loss was heavy but the colonel commanding the outposts was stripped of his sword and threatened with death by Zaragoza for attempting to utilize raw troops in such an important position.

The federal never expected to win. They had decided from the beginning they were doomed and so got train ready for the retreat and levied taxes to provide expenses.

The effect of this lack of confidence on men about to engage in a fierce battle needs no military understanding. The light continued all night, neither side leaving the trenches. Firing ceased Wednesday morning without advantage to either.

Wednesday dawned cloudy and early in the morning a thick fog poured in from the sea, forming a dense blanket over the battleground under which it was not possible to see more than 100 yards. The Bravo and Zaragoza were silenced, being unable to see the range signal flashed from the cathedral tower. The Vera Cruz likewise was handicapped by the impenetrable fog.

Just below the Morillos drawbridge where the San Luis railroad crosses the Panuco, seven trains with steam up were standing on the tracks at the railroad station near the docks. The rain was driving in blinding torrents, filling the federal outpost trenches, and slowly driving out the occupants then suddenly, through the driving rain, the rebel trenches belched constitutionalists in three divisions.

Gen. Gonzalez had picked the hour of doom for Tampico. The advance was on the federal's right and left. The besiegers advanced rapidly, flanking the federal position while the center was held back until the rapid fires had been drawn into position on the Altamira road.

Then Gonzalez bugler sounded the charge. The general advance was made on double-quick, accompanied by yelling, shrieking and shouts of "Viva Carranza."

The federalists who were not driven from their trenches by the rain broke and ran down the Altamira road, followed by a hail of bullets and rapid fire artillery, stopping only long enough to dynamite two streets near the Escuela fort and then set fire to the fort, destroying two million rounds of ammunition.

Gaining the trenches the captors took a short respite and celebrated their easy victory with more shouts of "Viva Villa" "Viva Carranza," and "Viva Wilson," and more firing in the air until the fugitives had reached the waiting trains.

It was not until then that the victors realized that the vanquished were escaping. A general pursuit was immediately ordered but three hours had already been lost and the federalists were all aboard the trains and across the Morillos drawbridge leaving the gunboat Vera Cruz to cover their retreat.

The pursuers, not to be balked commanded all the native boats along the river, loading them with men and supplies while they swam their horses and reassembled on the opposite shore to continue the pursuit following the wagon road, which runs parallel with the railway.

The federalists were gaining every mile, not knowing that they were traveling on a rebel controlled railway. As a matter of fact they were jumping from the frying pan into the fire, for Gen. Higinio Aguilar, fresh from his operations in the vicinity of Tampam, had come up the canal on

ICE BARRONS TO FORCE CHANGE

The Lake Carrier's association, in which are enrolled, according to letter the secretary has written to The Press, 475 vessels, carrying crews which number 11,000 persons, is this season emulating the "safety first" movement now so firmly established throughout. Prior to this year the "safety first" movement had been introduced in some of the fleets, but this season special attention is being given to the health of the crews, and a campaign to give them foodstuffs, milk and ice that have been guarded against contamination is being planned.

Along with this work, it is also announced that the vessels in the association will take special care not to themselves be the means of spreading disease. One practice that will be stopped is the discharge of water ballast that may have been taken on in the polluted lower lake harbors near the intakes that supply upper lake cities with water. This practice has frequently been the occasion of complaint in Marquette and it is believed that it may have been a factor in causing the recurrent typhoid here.

The Lake Carrier's association's campaign for health on the lakes is predicated on the assumption that a man is in no condition to give his employer good service unless he is in good physical condition. The initial steps in the campaign have to do with the care and preparation of food supplies. Every dealer on the whole chain of lakes supplying meats, milk, groceries and ice to the boats has received a circular from the welfare plan committee of the association outlining certain simple rules to be observed in the care of food-stuffs. Meats are to be kept in the refrigerator away from flies and not exposed to handling by prospective customers. Milk must be pure and cannot be transferred from one can to another until the cans have been sterilized and ice must under no circumstances come in contact with food. Manufactured ice is preferred because, being made from distilled water, it is chemically pure, while natural ice may be of doubtful purity. The observance of these rules will go a long way towards the elimination of typhoid fever cases, because typhoid is a disease which is communicated to the system through food and drink.

In addition, the sanitary committee of the Lake Carrier's association has defined the areas on the great lakes from which drinking water may be drawn for the vessels. It is known that practically all the water in the connecting rivers and for a distance from eight to twelve miles from the shore line of the larger cities is polluted. With pure food and pure water and absolute cleanliness aboard ship there should be a distinct improvement in the morale of the lake fleet.

two barges loaded with 500 men and supplies and equipment the day before anticipating just such a contingency and was waiting at the town of Eban on the San Luis-Tampico railroad to head off the retreating federalists.

Pedro Gonzales, who, with a force of rebels had been destroying the railroad in the vicinity of Cardenas, also lay in wait in the jungle to attack the fugitives on the flank. The work of annihilation is going on.

WHAT A PLACE FOR A HONEYMOON

Chicago, May 19.—A man from Mexico, a girl from Chicago, an automobile ride, a dinner party at La Porte, Ind., a proposal, a wedding, and a proposed honeymoon in the heart of Huerta's war swept realm.

That is the synopsis of the adventure of Maurice F. McNab-Jones, a Scotch engineer of Mexico City, now the center of converging rebel armies, and Miss Marie Ritter of 4738 Magnolia avenue, the daughter of Charles H. Ritter, of the Walden Shaw Taxicab company. The romance was disclosed last night and came about like this.

Miss Ritter visited friends in Somerset, Ky., in the fall of 1912. While there she attended a Halloween party. Also present was the bronzed Scotchman, then employed by an eastern engineering firm and in the little town on business. He was a graduate of the University of Leeds.

Attraction Drws Pair.
The lights in the jack o'lanterns flickered. Over cider and doughnuts attraction kindled. Before the engineer left town another meeting was arranged for Christmas. Courtship that might have ended in a wedding was suddenly ended when McNab-Jones was sent to Mexico City.

McNab-Jones had been appointed engineer of the Consolidated Rolling Mills and Foundries company. In Mexico City he found a brother of Miss Ritter. He was Frederick D. Ritter, director of repairs of the railways of Mexico. Troublesome days for the Mexican dictator did not trouble McNab-Jones. He sailed from Vera Cruz three days before the town was seized by the American marines. Early this week he arrived in Chicago. On Thursday Miss Ritter informed him a friend in LaPorte planned a dinner for that night. It was to be in his honor. He suggested an automobile ride to the Indiana city.

Editor "Pops Question."
Out through Michigan City the happy couple sped. They arrived barely in time for the dinner at the New Rumley hotel. The host, E. J. Widdell, one of the owners of the LaPorte Herald, was waiting. He suspected the two were engaged.

"Why not settle this right now and be married tonight?" Widdell suggested.

"I'm game," replied McNab-Jones, glancing at Miss Ritter.

Miss Ritter nodded.

Mr. Widdell acted as best man and Miss Clara Miller as bridesmaid.

Mr. and Mrs. McNab-Jones plan to leave for Mexico a week from Thursday.

McNab-Jones is an admirer of the dictator, Huerta.

"He is quite misrepresented in the American press," said the engineer. "I know of no Mexican who is so straightforward as Huerta. He is very fond of children and very human. He seldom if ever drinks and never loses control of himself."

SALT TO KILL THE DANDELION

Washington, D. C., May 18.—The best way to kill individual dandelion plants is to cut off their tops and put a pinch of salt (about a thimbleful) on the surface of each exposed root. The salt should be used sparingly and applied only to the root-tops of the dandelion. The U. S. Department of Agriculture has for some time been testing various poisons to discover the most efficient means of eradicating this troublesome weed from lawns, but altogether others have been found satisfactory, the common salt is best for general use as there is no danger accompanying its application.

Should Poison Root.

The Department's specialists say that much effort is wasted in merely cutting off the dandelion top without applying some poison to the root that remains. The dandelion has a tap root that grows deep into the soil and cutting off the plant merely encourages the dandelion to come up in a thicker growth.

The time to eradicate dandelions is in the spring before the plant has had time to form seed. The seed spreads rapidly, blown by the wind. The blossoms should be close mown before they have gone to seed and salt should then be applied to each root. A man may be diligent in caring for his own lawn and yet have seeds blown in from neighboring lawns. This is of such importance to those desiring fine lawns, that it might be made a matter for community action.

Crowd Out Weed.

If the lawn is very full of this weed it is too tedious a process to treat each plant by the salt process. In this case two possible methods of eradication may be recommended. The first method is to thicken the stand of grass to tend to crowd out the dandelion. The grass should be put into a vigorous condition by top dressing with well-rotted manure or fertilizer in the fall, and by reseeding in thin places. The second method, advised in extreme instances, is to start all over again. Plow up the lawn first (or spade it up if the area is small) a generous amount of well-rotted manure should then be worked into the soil, but fresh manure for that is full of weedseeds ready to germinate. In case manure is not available, commercial fertilizers may be used. Many lawn soils are in need of lime and it is often a wise plan to use it, especially if white clover is to be sown. After plowing the land should be harrowed or raked frequently to reduce it to good seed bed condition. This will encourage the early germination of weed seeds with the subsequent extermination of the seedlings.

Thorough cultivation at this period will destroy the dandelion plants, both those that come from roots and seeds. After following either of the two plans sketched here, the lawn should be maintained in good condition by careful mowing, rolling and watering.

Iron Solution Bad.

Spraying with iron sulphate solution to kill dandelions without killing the grass is not recommended by the Department, although it has been tried by some who consider it successful. Experiments don't seem to establish it as a practical method.

The dandelion is not a native American plant, having been introduced in the East and has spread westward with our emigration. The weed is common all over Europe and has gone into other lands with settlers from the older country, always being found near the communities of man.

The name "dandelion" is said to come from the French, "Dent de Lion" which means tooth of lion and refers to the tooth shaped edges of the leaf of the plant.

MAN GETS A LETTER SENT HIM FROM HELL

Marquette, Mich., May 19.—W. H. Richmond, master mechanic for the Southeastern railroad, has received a letter from Hell. No joke about it; the postmark's right on the outside, but it isn't issued by the government presided over by Hon. Satan. This Hell is in Norway and its one fine place according to the letter, which comes from Harry A. Norton, a commercial man well known in Marquette. Mr. Norton is traveling for a railroad equipment concern and is in Norway on business.

"This is Hell all right," writes Mr. Norton, "but strangely enough I like it. It is not at all like the place you think it is. The temperature is delightful; the people are kind and generous, and there is not brimstone in the air. You probably have never before heard of a man who went to Hell and liked it. While I am in Hell, it is only for a short time."

MAN IS SLUGGED AND THEN ROBBED

Menominee, Mich., May 19.—One man is under arrest, and a posse headed by Sheriff Joseph Kell is scouring the country in the vicinity of Whitney for the other of two men alleged to have waylaid Frank Poloskie, a farmer residing near Whitney, Saturday night, knocked him unconscious by a blow from a beer bottle, and robbed him of his pocketbook.

Only Loses Fifty Cents.
Poloskie was painfully although not seriously injured. His scalp was split by the blow which broke the bottle and he received other cuts due to the flying glass. He stated to Sheriff Kell this morning that he lost but 50 cents all he had with him at the time of the hold up.

Gets One Suspect.
Sheriff Kell was at Wilson when news of the robbery reached him. He arrived at Whitney in time to capture one of the alleged highwaymen. The other escaped but his identity is known and he will probably be taken into custody before night. The sheriff and his prisoner will arrive in the city on a late train.

Crazed by Death of Sweetheart, Youth Holds Up Funeral and Shoots Up Town

Aurora, Ill., May 19.—Bernard Swenson, 25 years old, a Leland farmhand, crazed by the death of his sweetheart, shot a revolver and a repeating rifle, got his brother, Bert, in the hip, riddled a passing automobile in which five persons rode, fired repeated rounds at people and animals and objects which came before his visions and then took up a position in the only road leading to a cemetery, and held up the funeral of Miss Lucile Baker for four hours after he had fired at the driver of the hearse.

Swenson's fellow townsmen say that he was interested in Miss Baker and that he went insane while brooding and wild fancy sent him forth to halt her burial by persons who "knew not what they did." Swenson was captured in a hand-to-hand conflict by his brother and Sheriff Poust, DeKalb county, after the crazed man had run out of ammunition. The delayed funeral cortege then proceeded to the cemetery.

Vera Cruz Living Its Life As Of Old Pretty Senioritas, Bands, Beggars, All

Vera Cruz, Mexico, May 19.—Night on the plaza.

Vera Cruz is trying to pretend that it is enjoying itself.

On two sides of the square hotels in front of which we drink lemonade. The waiters, who love us with their lips and hate us in their hearts, are devastated with grief because there is no ice. Being members of a stern and heroic race, we continue to drink the warm, sickish stuff.

On the third side of the plaza the cathedral. One of its bells is silent shattered by a cannon shot from the fleet when the city fell. In the tower four sentries stand, looking down into the plaza. A fifth man flashes messages to the fleet and the outposts. All around the signal lights are flashing. Shafts of light from the searchlights streak the sky.

On the fourth side of the plaza is the Constitution where troops are quartered. The provo guard brings in peons who are drunken on vino. They think they are going to die.

Tomorrow, sober, they will be released and fed. Already they are learning that to be arrested by the Americans is not half bad.

In the stand in the middle of the plaza a soldier band is playing. When it strikes up "The Star Spangled Banner," we rise, our soldiers and officers very stiff and erect. An American planter who has lived in Mexico 20 years, says: "By —, that listens good!"

But the Mexicans sit scowling at their little tables and a group of British naval officers from the Essex remain seated. No discourtesy is meant. To stand at such a time might be interpreted as "taking sides."

Not so a group of French marines in top-heavy white helmets. They rise to their feet and bare their heads. They are short, stocky men, and they look efficient, for all their ill-fitting clothes, but on their sweating faces is an almost sickly pallor that contrasts curiously with the ruddy complexion of the Americans.

The band strikes up a lively ragtime tune. The soldiers, khaki-clad slither over the flagged floor of the plaza. A rifle is slung from the shoulder of one of them.

Even the Mexicans are compelled to smile grimly at their antics.

Many Celebrities.
Very difficult to place are the women at the tables. A few are wives of officers. Others are expatriates. Even the young among them seem old

They are over-dressed. Their faces are stained. Perhaps it's the heat. One imagines they are tired, and that their gaiety is artificial and forced.

There are celebrities on the plaza. Jack London, in loose-fitting khaki, knows every one and continues his bout with John Barleycorn. Richard Harding Davis, the novelist, looking uncomfortable in correct and starched clothes, holds aloof.

To him comes a filthy beggar whining and showing hideous sores. Davis shudders and turns away.

The crowds at the tables thin. The women have gone to bed to toss thru sleepless hours in stifling rooms. For in Mexico no woman of virtue may go abroad without escort at any hour and not at all after 9 o'clock.

Come then pretty and smiling senioritas of the underworld. Come, too slinking from the alleys, the creatures of the Mexican night, to search for scraps among the tables and in the gutters. Gaunt they are, and very timid.

Taps has long since sounded. The magpies in the plaza no longer chatter. All around the lights are winking, from hill and ship, and steeple. They are telling the story of the night—that there is order in the city, and the federals are keeping a respectful distance from the outposts—and all's well.

And so, finally, we go to our beds. I was having breakfast on the sidewalk of the plaza when a boy stole a role from my plate. He expected instant death. So when I spared his life and let him eat the roll he explained to me in dumb show that his father, too, was hungry.

The waiter, whose English was better than my Spanish, would have driven him away.

"Why are they hungry?" I asked. "They were prisoners, señor," the waiter said. "The sailors of the Americans came and released them from over yonder."

"Over yonder" was the bull pen behind the Constitution. It can be seen from the plaza. A huge building, like a public market place, but barred.

"Why were the prisoners?" With many gestures and shoulder shrugs the waiter told the story.

It was Diaz who put them there—they and many others. They were peons and very poor. The master told them to fight the soldiers of Diaz. So they fought, save that the master told them to.

Madero ousted Diaz. Still lingered

the father and son in the bull pen. They were forgotten.

Huerta came into power. Still they stayed in the bull pen. They stretched their skinny claws through the bars, begging for food. They lost all track of time. Maybe it was two years or maybe three or four.

Often prisoners died. The corpses lay untouched for days, rotting in the heat.

When the Americans came and opened the doors, the prisoners that they were some new and strange kind of Mexican rebels and that they would be immediately slain.

Instead the doors were opened and they were given food and let go. They couldn't understand it. They can't now.

"Ask them where they came from and why they don't go home."

They had worked for the master. It was far away. How should they they know how far? Where? They did not know.

Had the man a wife, the boy a mother? Si señor. Alive or dead? How could they tell?

Did they know what the Americans were doing in Vera Cruz? No, señor. I gave them 20 cents Mex. to pose for a picture and they called down upon me the blessing of the particular Virgin of the district when they came. There was the look in their eyes that you see in the eyes of a mongrel who expects a kick and receives a caress.

Water Talk No. 1

To the Citizens and Taxpayers of Escanaba:

Appreciating the close relations which exist between the management of a Water Company and the consumers thereof, we have deemed it advisable to take you into the confidences of the Company that you may understand clearly and fairly the difficulties which the present management of the Company has had to contend with during the past two or three years.

In 1911, the financial affairs of the Escanaba Water Company reached a climax. The President of the Company, George Weaver, and the Treasurer, W. D. Boyer, both of Scranton, Pa., found themselves confronted by an issue of $69,500 First Mortgage 5% Bonds which were past due in interest and principal for about eighteen months, and which were about to be foreclosed. They were unable to finance the sale of overlying securities reserved to retire this issue and were unable to secure any extension of the Mortgage. That Management had sold during the previous years, an issue of $250,000 Second Mortgage 5% Bonds, $69,500 of which were held by the Trustee to refund the previous issue. Succeeding this second mortgage issue, there was outstanding $100,000 of 5% Third Mortgage Bonds, a part of which had been placed in local banks in Pennsylvania as collateral on loans to provide monies for the construction of the Filtration Plant built in 1909. There were, therefore, about $350,000 of bonds outstanding against this plant in addition to about $250,000 of stock, mostly held by the old Management. The present interests in control of the Company had, through their connections with banking institutions, loaned money not only to the old Management, but also to individuals upon the Second Mortgage and Third Mortgage Bonds. To protect the loans it was necessary to secure immediate action and prevent the foreclosure of the $69,500 First Mortgage Bonds due, which would eliminate the equities of the Second and Third Mortgage bondholders. In February, 1912, three days before the Water Company was to be sold by the U. S. District Court of Northern Michigan, a Syndicate was organized hurriedly in Scranton by five banks and two individuals, viz.: Dime Bank, Traders' National Bank, Scranton Trust Co., Executor, Merchants' & Mechanics' Bank, Potomac Savings Bank, E. S. Jones, Thos. E. Jones and Brooks & Company, all of whom, except the last, were interested in large amounts of the Second and Third Mortgage Bonds. A fund of $80,000 was subscribed to purchase the $69,500 5% bonds held in Boston, and which were one year and a half past due, and to provide payment of interest and costs upon same. This required about $75,000 of the fund. The Syndicate then advertised that all innocent bondholders not connected in any way with the old management of the Escanaba Water Company would be protected, as far as possible, to the extent of their actual cash investments, and accordingly it was found that about fifteen banks throughout Pennsylvania were interested in the bonds and also about thirty individuals.

Mr. J. E. Weissenfluh, a member of the firm of Brooks & Company, Bankers, of Scranton, Pa., who had been chosen to reorganize the finances of the Company, went to Escanaba, and on April 15, 1912, bought in at the Master's Sale held by the U. S. District Court of Northern Michigan the property, NOT ON THE BASIS OF ITS ACTUAL VALUE, but at a price sufficiently high enough to pay off the old issue of $89,500 5% bonds, which were a first lien on the property and the interest and costs attached to sale of property, all of which amounted to approximately $75,000.

The next step necessary was to ascertain the real value of the plant and what was done in this connection will now be explained.

THE HYPNOTIC BEAR.

The doctor shook his head as he slipped his ophthalmoscope into his pocket, and Ray, the trainer, who had been holding the bear's head still while the oculist made the examination, opened the door of the cage for him. The bear—a medium-sized black animal—wandered aimlessly about, stumbling over the water pan and knocking its head against the bars, its eyes, which were evidently sightless, shining like two fiery opals as they reflected the electric light.

"I am sorry to tell you that it is a hopeless case," said the physician to the proprietor, who was standing with the stranger in front of the cage watching the examination. "Both optic nerves are atrophied, and the animal must have received some serious injury, possibly a heavy blow on the forehead." The proprietor, who has the reputation of being a "good loser," thanked him and gave some directions to the trainer about the care of the animal before leading the way to the table in front of the arena, where the press agent was waiting for them.

"It is rather unusual to call the most famous specialist in the country to examine a menagerie animal," he said, after the doctor hurriedly left. "But I was willing to pay anything in reason to restore the sight of this particular specimen, so I sent for the best-known oculist in New York. The decision which he has just given will probably mean a loss of thousands of dollars to me, but that is one of the risks which I have to assume. Would it interest you to hear a rather unusual romance of the menagerie business?" The stranger gave eager assent, and the press agent settled himself comfortably and lighted a cigar.

"You have no idea how many animals are offered to the owner of a menagerie and from what unusual sources the offers come," said the proprietor. "Travelers in far countries bring back strange animals as pets or curiosities; people buy young wild animals which get beyond control when they mature and become veritable white elephants on their hands, and their owners have to dispose of them. I have had everything from monkeys to lions brought to me, and so it did not surprise me when an artist came to the hippodrome in Paris last winter and asked me if I didn't want to purchase a bear. He seemed anxious for me to see it immediately, and at his earnest solicitation I got in a cab with him and drove to his about him: he seemed to have an aversion to cats. The bodies of three of them had been found in front of his cage, although we had never seen one killed. The cats about a menagerie instinctively keep out of harm's way, and it puzzled me to know how Mephisto had managed to get them within reach of his heavy paw. Jack Bonavita, who fusses about his lions at all hours of the day and night, solved the mystery and incidentally saved his pet cat, Tramp, from an untimely ending. Tramp has been with Jack for years and appreciates the folly of venturing within reach of the animals in the cages, but Bonavita came across him in front of Mephisto's cage in the middle of the night. The bear was absolutely quiet, lying with its head on its paws and its eyes, which glistened like two points of flame, fixed on the cat. Tramp was staring at it in turn and slowly drawing nearer to the cage, apparently struggling against some influence which was stronger than its will. Bonavita watched them for a few minutes, but before the cat ventured within striking distance he picked it up and carried it away, while Mephisto, growling with rage, tried to break through the stout bars and get at it.

"Two days before we were to sail for America I was sitting at my desk arranging some of the last details of shipment, when the door burst open and a well-dressed, handsome woman rushed in, followed by the artist who had sold me the bear. She was in a tearing rage and jabbering excitedly in a language which I did not understand, while the artist was trying to quiet her. She pushed him aside, and opening a purse which was well stuffed with banknotes, she asked in French, which she spoke with a marked foreign accent, for how much I would sell Mephisto. The artist protested, but she turned on him and gave him a tongue lashing of which I could guess the meaning, although the words were unintelligible to me. I couldn't quite grasp the situation, but the strange hypnotic power which the bear apparently exercised over cats had excited my curiosity, and I wished to investigate it at my leisure, so I politely but positively refused to name a price, and told her the animal was not for sale. The artist seemed relieved and she was very much disappointed, but she quitted down and asked me what I intended to do with the animal. I told her that I was taking it to America, where it would be put in a mixed group which Ray was to

"And she does carry that name and was born to it," he continued, "but I can't tell you what it is. She didn't tell it to me and it was not on the passenger list, but the ambassador from a great European nation came on from Washington to see her and remonstrate with her and to influence me to exclude her from the show. I wouldn't consent to that, but I am afraid that the accident of the bear's going blind will be the cause of my losing an act which promised to be sensational."

"You have kept it quiet enough," said the press agent with a trace of resentment in his voice.

"As I told you, there are reasons why I can't exploit it," answered the proprietor. "I am counting upon it for my opening season at the Paris hippodrome next winter, and I don't intend to discount it before a Coney Island audience. But to get back to my experience with her on the steamer. I found that she occupied the most expensive deck stateroom, and had a maid and a man servant traveling with her; so that I refused all of her renewed offers for the bear when I found the powerful fascination it had for her, and I finally consented to let her try the experiment of working with a group of animals. You know the class from which trainers are usually recruited, and you can imagine the interest I take in a woman who possesses an absolute fearlessness which is inherited from generations of ancestors who have never shown the white feather, in addition to education and intelligence. The only thing which puzzled me was her motive, and that I have not discovered yet, although the ambassador, who had received all sorts of communications about her from his own government, told me her history. It seems that she has always been noted for her eccentricity and her rebellion against the strict laws of convention which were supposed to control her life, and this is not the first time she has defied them. She had commissioned the artist—who, by the way, is one of the most celebrated men in Paris—to paint a portrait of her. At the same time he was painting an exhibition picture to be called the 'Dancing Bear,' and had purchased Mephisto for a model. The picture was to represent the bear dancing on its hind legs opposite a woman, to the music of a fageotte played by a man bear leader—such an exhibition as is commonly given at the country fairs throughout Europe. He had no difficulty in getting a male model, but he was in despair about the woman dancer. He tried model after model, and although they started in all right each one became so nervous after a sitting or two that they refused to continue. The bear was chained to the wall and they were posed safely out of reach, but each of them asserted that the animal was like a serpent and trying to charm them so that they would come close enough to be caught. They were all afraid that they might yield to the fascination and be seriously injured. Tramp, the cat, would probably have told the same story if he had been able to talk."

"He mentioned the latter during one of the sittings for the portrait, and the lady, being curious to see the animal, came to his studio—and then the trouble commenced. She developed a most unaccountable attachment for Mephisto, and he was as gentle as a lamb with her. They would sit facing each other by the hour, and the artist swore they talked to each other and understood each other perfectly. The animal never attempted to harm her, but the artist became alarmed for fear there should be an accident, and believing that there was something uncanny about the brute, he decided to get rid of it and sold it to me.

"Well, I watched her with the bear on shipboard and since we landed, and I can't yet understand her control over it for it does not control her in any way. There seems to be a sympathy between them which makes them absolutely understand each other, and through it she understands the other caged beasts. The act which I had framed for her when I found that she was absolutely in earnest was a dance to be given in the midst of a group of adult lions. The lady is absolutely fearless and approved the plan, but stipulated that she should select the lions.

"For the past three days she has been anxious and uneasy about the bear and has insisted that it was rapidly going blind. She says that the bear is her teacher about things in the animal world, and that she can tell what it is thinking about. Its eyes look perfectly sound, and it is only for two days that we have noticed anything wrong with it. Mephisto knew its way about its old cage so well that it gave no evidence of blindness, and a bear is naturally clumsy in its movements, but when we moved it to a strange den it stumbled over everything. I experimented by bringing Tramp in front of its cage, but with the loss of sight the hypnotic power has apparently deserted it, and the cat paid no attention to it. Finally I called in the doctor and you heard him pronounce his verdict."

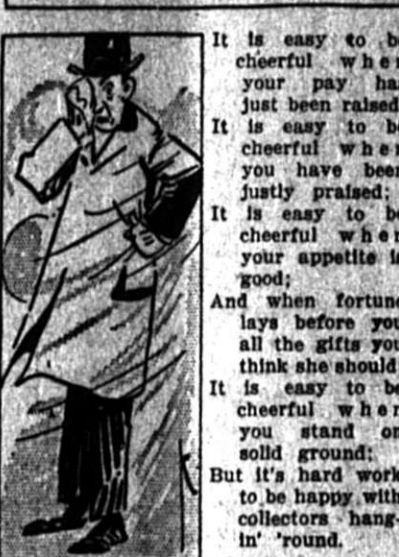

"How do you account for it all—her infatuation for the bear and her intuitive knowledge of the dispositions of the lions?" asked the stranger.

"I don't try to account for anything. It is one of the thousand things about animals and the million things about women which no more man can understand," replied the proprietor, laughing. "I have simply given you the facts of the situation and you can draw your own conclusions, but the bear's blindness upsets my plans and possibly prevents a sensation in circles which approach royalty."

The ONLOOKER

By HENRY HOWLAND

FLIES in the OINTMENT

It is easy to be cheerful when your pay has just been raised; it is easy to be cheerful when you have been just praised; it is easy to be cheerful when your appetite is good; and when fortune lays before you all the gifts you think she should: it is easy to be cheerful when you stand on solid ground. But it's hard work to be happy with collectors' hang-in' round.

It is easy to be hopeful when the glad spring breezes blow; it is easy to be hopeful when you're blessing to bestow; it is easy to be hopeful when your darling ventures pay. And when all the world is gladly strewing roses in your way; it is easy to be hopeful when you have no cause to sigh. But it's hard work to be happy when a dentist has you down.

CANDID OPINION.

As soon as a man gets $10,000 he begins to fear that somebody is trying to stir up class hatred.

Society is always being condemned by those who are unable to break in.

When a girl begins to talk a great deal about some other man it is an excellent time to propose to her.

No woman would be safe if the man who has a jealous wife were the lady-killer she thinks him to be.

The Lion Tamer.
"Why ain't the lion tamer here?" asked the manager of the circus. "It's time for the show to begin and he ain't nowhere around."
"Haven't you heard about him?" replied the ringmaster. "He married the midget this morning, and she chased him across the hills back of town a little while ago because he flirted with one of the lady bareback riders."

ROMANCE.

"You wouldn't believe me," said the suffragette, "if I were to tell you how I met my husband."
"I might. How was it?"
"I had thrown a stone through his window and he was cut over the eye by a piece of flying glass. While I was binding up his wound he fell in love with me."

CONDITIONAL.

"Does your husband point with pride or view with alarm?"
"It all depends. When he refers to anything he has been doing he points with pride, but if it is necessary for the children or me to have anything new he views with alarm."

AN IMPROVEMENT.

How beautiful the world would be, How peaceful and delightful, How utterly and blissfully free From all things foul or spiteful. If in some way it might be known How all men here abiding Might let their good traits all be shown And keep their faults in hiding.

SHE HATED IT—YES.

"I hate flattery," she said.
"Of course you do," he replied.
"Every pretty girl does."
Then she drew a long, deep sigh and permitted him to press her cheek against his own.

TRAVEL.

"Don't you think travel broadens one?"
"Yes. After man's trip to Massachusetts she didn't have a thing hardly that she could wear."

We Never Learn Not to Write.
The years of man seem all too brief: One lesson ne'er, alas, is learned: Still foxy people come to grief Because their letters were not burned.

LIMITED MAXIM.

"Never too old to learn," said the hopeful man.
"The motto has been revised," replied Miss Cayenne. "It now reads, 'Never too old to tango.'"

A MISTAKE.

"Something was the matter with the roof—"
"Blew off!"
"No; shut in. It was the roof of my mouth."

Talent and Genius are Different

By NATHAN HASKELL DOLE

There is on such thing as genius. The practical man of affairs scornfully assures us that it is only concentrated hard work. Disraeli analyzed it and asserts categorically that patience is its essential constituent.

But the great mass of men and women, without defining, asserting, analyzing, know perfectly well that there is a difference, and they do not hesitate to use the words in every-day speech with fair accuracy. They instinctively respect anyone who has a talent, while they pity, permit to perish, or even persecute the man of genius, regarding him as impracticable, subversive and dangerous, perhaps insane.

The man of talent is likely to make a success of his life. The man of genius is apt to be out of relationship with his environment—ahead of his own times. The prophet is not without honor except in his own house. They used to stone him. The innovators in music and art have been rendered miserable by those who could not understand them.

Take concrete examples such as we have all seen. A youth has been apprenticed to a carpenter. "How is he getting along?" "Oh, he has a talent for his work." In other words, he uses tools cleverly. He needs not to invent any new methods; he plods, is patient, makes few mistakes. So with a hundred different callings. A plumber, a teacher, a preacher, a dentist, a doctor, an editor, a butcher. The very term "calling" signifies that a person has some distinctive talent, it may be, of a very high degree, yet it is always sane, always safe, always has its feet on the ground.

Not so with genius. Genius manifests itself generally in extraordinary and abnormal ways. The musical genius, even while lying in the cradle, plays on his toes as if they were piano keys and begins to compose before he can talk. He does not have to be taught about consecutive fifths. He avoids them instinctively. He will very likely end his days in an insane asylum, but his productions will some time or other be recognized as marvelous. The world will catch up with them.

Talent marries normally and leads a sound and sober life. Genius is inclined to set itself above common laws of morality. The love affairs of the great poets and musicians make racy reading. Fortunately most of us are born good, average, plodding human beings with sufficient talent to do something useful. It would be a terrible world if there were many more geniuses. They are sufficiently rare to permit the rest of us to adjust ourselves to a reasonable existence and they furnish us with a sufficient spice of excitement and enjoyment to make us worship them after they are dead. Probably a dead genius is better than a living man of talent; but a living genius may be more dangerous than a maniac. It is a great responsibility to be the parents of a genius, and as the offspring of mixed nationalities are more likely to have this abnormality there seems to be some instinctive reason for the almost universal prejudice against the union of alien races.

Dangers Cling to Alkaline Soaps

By A. A. MORSE, Philadelphia, Pa.

That many dangers cling to alkaline soaps is emphasized editorially by the London Lancet, in which attention is called to the large proportion of mineral ash and alkali in deodor toilet soaps.

When these soaps, after being dissolved in water, touch the skin an excessive secretion of the acid sebum and sweat follows and the protective outer layer of the skin, the epithelium, is partially dissolved. This means intense irritation, which is apt to lead to skin complications.

In the cheaper soaps the cottonseed oil and rancid fats used are responsible for considerable irritation. Castor oil soap is found least irritating, but it dissolves rather too freely and is apt to become rancid. Coconut oil soap is decidedly irritating and palm oil soap is less so, while tallow soap is least irritating of all.

Dr. Frederick Gardner, accepted as an authority on this subject, holds that many bad effects come from these soaps made chiefly of cheaper fats and cottonseed and coconut oils. Formerly tallow and olive oil were more used and the skin did not suffer.

The natural conclusion is that as little soap as possible should be used on the skin and that this should be least alkaline in quality. It should always be well rinsed off, so as to permit the least possible irritation.

Business Man's Key to Success

By J. B. GEHRING, Indianapolis, Ind.

The other day a big business man was asked for his key to success. After he had motioned his secretary from the room, he said: "Because I've always accomplished everything I undertook every one calls me lucky. As a boy I was laughed at. I finally ran away to New York, and my first job paid $3. But I gave $6-worth of service. And that has been my key to success. I always gave more than I got. My employers knew that when I had a thing in hand it would be carried out successfully. Often during rush hours I stayed alone at the office until after ten. No one else knew it. I never had to tell my boss I wasn't paid enough, and never had to ask for a raise. If I came unasked. Today I can command my own price. Do you call that luck or grit?"

Young man or young woman, if you aren't delivering the goods for your employer, then what are you? If you resigned tomorrow couldn't he get a hundred more of the same caliber, no better, no worse?

Why not lift yourself above the average? Do your work so that he would have to try a hundred before he could get another like you. Then you'll be in a class by yourself.

Best to Discard Threadbare Traditions

By W. M. KELLEY, Chicago

For the last decade the average American citizen has discarded the whip while he brought his child to the stage where the latter becomes self-dependent. But there is an element of people here who beat their children unmercifully. Compare the children of these two classes of parents. Who is self-reliant, honest, fearless? Do you suppose the child who is habitually whipped becomes a power in this world? Most emphatically not.

Reformers who desire to make this world better should not start from the top. Reforming a hardened crook is difficult.

Here, then, is some advice for parents: If your son is a bit wayward, don't throw him out of the house. Find out the cause of his waywardness. Get your son and daughter interested in some wholesome topic or fad. Help them all you can, gain their confidence and, above all, discard these threadbare traditions, "Spare the rod and spoil the child" and "A child should be seen and not heard."

FEELS LIKE A NEW WOMAN

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headaches and Dizziness.

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very grateful if I failed to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves, for I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I hear a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, lassitude, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. ORPHEA TURNER, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

AFTER HALF-CENTURY MARK

No Real Reason Why Man of That Age Should Not Be Capable of Good Work.

Speaking of the age of efficiency, a Toledo gentleman locates it beyond the half-century mark. He calls our attention to the fact that Columbus was fifty-six when he discovered America, that Darwin, Kant, Spencer, Wagner, Haydn and others did their greatest and best work when far past the fifty mark, and that some have persisted in great accomplishment until seventy or more years of age. This argument won't help the man who is aged and broken and tottering at fifty, will it? But it will hearten the man of forty or more who has been careful of his resources, to think that to him achievement still is a possibility—and it may find him the opportunity to achieve by convincing some master of opportunity that years do not always spell senility or loss of virility. The young man may reflect that he has the opportunity to run a long race—and he may catch sight of the fact that the man of fifty is not necessarily a "back number" merely because of his half-century.

Too Much for Him.

A colored porter for a local druggist was told to go to another pharmacy to get some elmcifugo rasemones. He stood, open-mouthed, and gazed at his "boss," then asked: "Ain't thar any other name for dat?"

HAPPY NOW

Family of Twelve Drink Postum.

"It certainly has been a blessing in our home," writes a young lady in regard to Postum.

"I am one of a family of twelve, who, before using Postum, would make a healthy person uncomfortable by their complaining of headache, dizziness, sour stomach, etc., from drinking coffee.

"For years mother suffered from palpitation of the heart, sick headache and bad stomach and at times would be taken violently ill. About a year ago she quit coffee and began Postum.

"My brother was troubled with headache and dizziness all the time he drank coffee. All those troubles of my mother and brother have disappeared since Postum has taken the place of coffee.

"A sister was ill nearly all her life with headache and heart trouble, and about all she cared for was coffee and tea. The doctors told her she must leave them alone, as medicine did her no permanent good.

"She thought nothing would take the place of coffee until we induced her to try Postum. Now her troubles are all gone and she is a happy little woman enjoying life as people should."

Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled, 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 50c and 80c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.—said by Grocers.

They Would Sit Facing Each Other by the Hour.

studio, which was situated on the far side of the Seine. The bear which you saw examined tonight was in a small room adjoining the studio, chained to a ring in the wall.

"The apartment was luxuriously furnished, and I realized that it was not lack of ready money which made the artist so anxious to dispose of the brute; but he seemed in a desperate hurry to have me take it away, and offered it for such a low price that I closed the bargain at once. I suggested sending one of my men for it in the evening, but he insisted upon my taking it with me, and as the bear was evidently as gentle as a kitten I called a closed cab and drove away with it. The bear sat comfortably on the seat beside me and gave no trouble, but as we drove along I got to thinking the matter over and the whole proceeding seemed a little strange. I had Mephisto, as the bear was named, put in a cage well away from the other animals—a sort of quarantine precaution which I always take with new arrivals—and he was apparently nothing unusual about him gave him little attention, there being for the moment no group of animals in the cage, there was always a crowd of women about his den; but I thought that it was because he was such an inveterate beggar, and had a habit of standing at the bars with his mouth wide open, waiting for some one to stick a lump of sugar into it.

"The bear had given us no trouble, and there was only one peculiar thing train, and after inquiring when we were to sail, they left the office.

"I regretted that I had not taken the opportunity to find out something about the history of the animal, and looked over the audience to try to locate the couple, but they had left the building. One of the keepers told me that she had screamed when she recognized the bear and called it by name. She was trying to bribe him to let her go into the cage when the artist came up and expostulated with her, and they had an awful row before coming to my office. I heard nothing more from them and we shipped the animals at Havre the following day. The traveling dens were placed in the 'tween decks, which is not a pleasant place to be when the ship is tossing about, and I was surprised the second day out to find the woman who had tried to purchase Mephisto standing in front of his cage in that smelly place, talking to the bear as if it were a child. She laughed when I came up to her, and told me that as I would not part with the bear I would have to take her with the show. I, too, laughed, for I have a large family of daughters, and I knew that the simple traveling gown which she wore had cost more than two months' salary of my best trainer, but to my great surprise she was in dead earnest, and asked me seriously if I would not let her train a group of animals."

The press agent grew very attentive, but the proprietor told him that he was not talking for publication, and that a name which occupied several pages of the Almanach de Gotha was sacred.

Menominee, Max 19 The township of Spalding will be obliged to pay the First state bank of Camden $4125, for a jury in circuit court Saturday afternoon rendered a decision in favor of the bank in the suit in assumption brought by it against the township.

The controversy arose over the purchase by the township of two voting machines in 1909. The Camden bank purchased of the machine company, the order given by the township in payment for the machines. The township denied the validity of the order, saying that it was not issued at a regularly called meeting of the township board.

I would call attention to the city ordinance which requires all trees on the public streets and highways to be trimmed up to a height of eight feet above the ground level. I wish that our people would carefully observe this ordinance, not only because it would eliminate the annoyance of low-hanging branches over the side walks, but if the trees were trimmed uniformly to a distance of eight feet from the ground our streets would present a much more beautiful appearance.

H. H. ROGERS

"A born financier," said the world, "Savings my pennies," said the man himself. He began life in absolute want, but when the pennies began to jingle in his pockets from the sale of papers on the streets of New Bedford, Mass., a young Rogers made up his mind that never again would he go hungry and cold and without clothes. If saving part of his earnings could provide for the proverbial "rainy day," so, when still a newsboy, he started a savings account and in later life freely attributed the wonderful success of his life to this beginning, inasmuch as the pennies in the bank were ready for investment in the Pennsylvania oil fields when the opportunity to advance them in that industry knocked at his door. H. H. Rogers' tremendous power in the world of finance is a similar place awaiting you if you followed his early example of frugality, industry and saving the pennies? It is never too late to begin a savings account—DO IT TODAY.
